Dear Members of the Chinese American Professors Association in Connecticut,

I am delighted to welcome you to Yale University to participate in the third annual conference of CAPA-CT. Thank you for coming to campus to share your immense expertise and perspectives on the main theme of this year's conference, "Transformation in Higher Education." As a group, you are exceptionally qualified to analyze and compare higher education in the United States and China.

Yale has had a longer and deeper relationship with China than any other university in the United States. For example, Yung Wing—also known as Rong Hong—was the first person from China to earn a degree from an American university when he graduated from Yale in 1854. The unique relationship between Yale and China has grown significantly stronger over the years, and there is an ever-increasing number of Chinese students and scholars at Yale. It is only fitting that CAPA-CT is holding this year's annual meeting at Yale.

You have my best wishes for a fruitful and enjoyable conference!

With warm regards,

Peter Salovey
President
Chris Argyris Professor of Psychology
