

China and the United Nations

Ambassador Liu Jieyi

2015 marks an important year for the United Nations as it celebrates the 70th anniversary of both the organization's founding and the end of World War II. His Excellency Liu Jieyi, the Ambassador of China to the United Nations, will discuss China's role in the United Nations.

One of China's top experts on United Nations issues, arms control, and U.S.-China relations, Ambassador Liu has served as the director-general of the Department of International Organizations and Conferences, the Department of Arms Control and Disarmament, and the Department of North American and Oceanian Affairs of China's Ministry of Foreign Affairs. He was previously the assistant minister and vice minister of foreign affairs. He has twice served as the president of the United Nations Security Council.

The McGill International Studies Fund was established in 1996 with a gift from Patricia C. and Charles H. McGill III '63. The gift helped secure a matching grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities. The fund supports the appointment of visiting humanities scholars, primarily international scholars, in the academic areas of international studies that include African studies, Asian studies, Latin American studies, Middle Eastern studies, global studies, and Russian and Eurasian studies.
